Dr Akshay Kamra is an Orthopaedic Surgeon specialising in hip, knee and trauma surgery for adults and children. Akshay moved to Sydney in his early teens from India where he had spent most of his childhood after having been born in the UK. He graduated from UNSW and then completed his orthopaedic training in Sydney.

Dr Kamra then went on to complete a fellowship in trauma, pelvic and lower limb arthroplasty and reconstructive surgery under the mentorship of Dr Robert Molnar and Dr Anthony Keeley at St George, Westmead and Sutherland Hospital. Dr Kamra obtained skills in both primary and revision surgery of the hip and knee, cartilage, meniscal and ligament knee surgery and hip arthroscopy – for labral pathology and femoral acetabular impingement. He also gained skills around the use of computer navigation and robotic surgery of both the hip and knee.

Akshay was then selected for a knee surgery fellowship at the world-renowned Nuffield Orthopaedic Centre, Oxford University Hospitals, where the greatest number of knee revisions in the UK are performed. He gained there skills around both primary and revision knee surgery, partial knee replacement, sports knee surgery and the management of bone and prosthetic joint infection.
